In 2013, nine million people became sick with TB. However, we have the knowledge and tools to design a comprehensive strategy focused on active case finding to identify those already sick, treatment for all forms of TB and prevention to halt progression to TB disease for those already infected. This symposium will focus on efforts to scale-up research, access, and political will in support of a comprehensive package of care.

Held in conjunction with the 2015 Union World Conference on Lung Health
